

Concept Question 2-2: What is the significance of a system being linear time-invariant?

The response of the system to an input is the convolution of the input and its impulse response.

The response of the system to a sinusoid is another sinusoid at the same frequency as the input, but (usually) different amplitude and phase. Both of these results assume that initial conditions are zero.